The Aristocracy Of Character.

Houston Post:

Robert Golet, brother of the duchess of Roxburgh—she was Miss May Golet and has just married the duke of Roxburgh—is reported to have married Miss Eleanor Anderson, a telegraph operator at the Grand hotel, New York. When Mr. Golet heard of the report he was very indignant and said: "I do not know and I have never seen or heard of this young woman-Anderson." The duke was also highly indignant and declared that the reporters who were investigating the case were dencedly inquisitive.—Condensed from the New York American.

Further inquiry into the case on the part of the New York papers develops the fact that "this woman-Anderson" is a sweet and gracious girl, as pure as she is beautiful and whose life is as heroic as all the others of that vast army of a great city's wage earners. If Mr. Robert Golet is worthy of her certainly the reports of his caddishness, the weakness of his character and the paucity of his intellectual attainments must do him a great injustice.

Incidentally it may be remarked that this duke of Roxburgh, judging from the impolite and churlish manner in which he has received American newspaper men, is not of a personality which would commend him to the respect of Americans. With the prospect of the impoverished seventeenth dukedom of Great Britain having added to its coffers 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 of United States' dollars, it would seem that this Duke-Roxburgh, would be in a good humor, but his annoyance at the democracy of this country has overshadowed all of his other feelings.

The duke and the duchess will go their way to their musty castle. Mr. Robert Golet will continue to ride with hounds, play bridge, bore and be bored, while there will be no interruption in the usefulness of this "woman-Anderson." The only unfortunate feature of the incident is that Miss Anderson's name has been dragged into the gossip.

RICE CROP SHORT.

Is Over a Million Bags Behind the Estimates.

Eagle Lake Advertiser:

Friday morning authentic information received from Houston placed the rice crop, at 1,000,000 barrels short in Texas and Louisiana. It is claimed by rice men here who are evidently in a position to know, that on the Moore & Cortez rice plantation in Matagorda county, the crop was at first estimated to be 125,000 barrels, but after it was harvested, the yield only reached 72,000 barrels. Thus a shortage of 53,000 barrels on one plantation.

The Advertiser knows from experience that late rice planted on a hundred acres was short on account of the very early cold.

The rice growers are much to blame for the present low prices, every rice grower rushed his grain on the market at the same time, and with few exceptions every grower claimed a 15 to 20 bag yield, and even some claimed the yield to reach as high as 35 bags. The mills were anxious to start up and paid a liberal price at first, but finding that at that rate they would have all their money soon tied up, early in the season withdrew from the market as to Honduras rice and solicited a trial shipment of toll rice. Japan rice was rushed in and only two weeks ago the price went to $2.60 and $2.40. The farmers cannot afford to longer be without some sort of organization.

Mr. Amthor Improving.

San Antonio Express:

A letter received from A. M. Amthor, the civil engineer of the Lott road to Brownsville, announces that he is slowly recovering from injuries received several weeks ago by a horse falling upon him. He says that the Lott road is being rapidly built and that a big gang of men is pushing the construction towards Brownsville at a rate that will insure a speedy completion to its terminus. Mr. Amthor will probably come to San Antonio as soon as he is able to make the trip.

Mr. Amthor is about well of the injuries received in the accident of the horse fall, but muscular rheumatism has affected his left leg for a number of days, which, however, is improving also, and his complete recovery is only a matter of a few more weeks. He has been in his room at the Miller hotel for six weeks, and in bed under the surgeon's care most of the time.
